Senior Class Will

We, the class of 1953, of the Morley High School, being without doubt of sane mind and good judgement do hereby legally declare this to be our last will and testament.

The Senior class wills Mr. Greenawald some hair dye to cover up all those gray hairs we caused him.

To Mr. Ridout the Seniors will a new set of patience and nerves for the ones which really got a work out, for the past four year.s.

To Mrs. Russell the Senior class wills a complete new set of stage equipment.

To Miss Miller the Senior class girls will a very neat Home Economics room.

Wayne Vernon wills his good behavior to Junior Gerdes. Now Junior be good, Wayne always was.

Kenneth Findley wills his ability of getting home early at night to Lonnie Hinrichsen.

Rosemary Shumaker wills her giggles to Carol Pulver. Now Carol the egg basket is not included.

Evelyn Findley wills Clara Pillard the ability to keep the basketball floors clean.

To Margo Ruhl, Harlene Tallman wills a new towel for the pipe down in the locker.

Ivan Jayne wills his ability to fix the school clocks to Allen Eden.

Laurene Conner wills her quiteness to Janet Sivers.

The Seniors leave to the School absolutely nothing, because we need all we have for the future.

Class Prophecy

It is the year 1968. A little girl is alone in her room in the big mansion at the top of the hill on Shumaker street in the city of Morley. We see what the little girl is doing. She is dialing a queer looking machine. We see that the label reads "Findleys' Time Machine." As the girl turns the dial a panel in the wall slides open and a huge screen is revealed. In huge bright letters we see some words flash across the screen. It says, Why, Yes, it reads, Class of 1953, Morley, Iowa. We can hardly believe our eyes as we gaze in wonder for across the screen flashes a picture of the stage in the gymnasium at Morley as it was the night of graduation the year 1953. Look at the graduates. They look a little relieved as Mr. Greenawald presents them to the school board and they receive their diplomas. They probably are relieved to know that it is really true but too we note a bit of sadness. Perhaps they are thinking of all the fun they had together in their school days, and kind of regret leaving them.

Now the screen changes and we see just the name of Laurene Conner on the screen. We see what looks like an airplane. Looking closer we agree that it is a new type plane. Across the side we see the words, "International-Super-Duper - Enginless-Propellerless-Tailless-and Stewardless plane model No. 35462468 by none other than Ivan Jayne. Well, that sounds like Ivan, alright. Ivan never believed in explaining anything with just a few words. But wait, where is Laurene? Oh, there she is inside the plane. She is wearing the uniform of a stewardess. She always said this is what she would like to do. It looks like she is really getting good. She races up and down the aisle balancing a tray on one hand. The screen flashes and why it must be a few years later, for there is Laurene balancing the same tray in one hand. But on the tray is a bottle of milk. I mean three bottles of milk and there in the crib are three charming little daughters. They start to cry and the frustrated Laurene falls to a chair in desperation. We wonder if she is dreaming of the days when she was still a stewardess.

Next we see the name of Wayne Vernon. We first see him sitting in an English class in college. He is sitting there giving his full attention to the teacher. Oh, that doesn't surprise me. He was always the perfect student in English class at Morley High, "Wasn't he, Mrs. Russell?" Now we see him in later life. He is walking up the steps of the Capitol building in Washington. He speaks to the people as he passes by and we discover that he has a southern accent. We also hear the people address him as SENATOR Vernon. We wonder what state in the good old United States he represents when suddenly Wayne turns and says in a deep voice, "Ah'm from TEXAS".

Next the name of Harlene Tallman flashes on the screen. A picture of a large building in Des Moines flashes on the screen. On one of the doors inside the building we see in Gold Letters a sign reading "Harlene Tallman." Under this is still another sign reading, "I track down robbers, thieves and murders, with just one restriction, there must be no danger involved." We hear sounds of music coming from the room. We know that must be Harlene.

The door opens and out comes Harlene with her guitar. I suppose that she probably still plays for the different occasions. But wait we discover that she is no longer "Shorty" Tallman, but now is a tall distinguished girl. The screen flashes and we see Harlene in her own little home. She is standing in front of six little children, three girls and three boys are organized in a little orchestra. We see watching them, Harlene's husband. He is tall, dark and handsome. I guess Harlene must have married one of the fellows on the Police force when she was doing her detective work.

Next we see the name of Kenneth Findley. Then we see a huge building about two blocks long. In bright lights we see the words "Kennys' Electro Company". As the different parts of the building are shown on the screen we see that there are modern facilities to repair and manufacture anything from crystal sets to three dimension television. We hear a shout of pain and know at once that that must be Kenny experimenting with electricity. I guess he still must make a slip once in a while and get that stinging sensation that comes from an electric shock as he used to do when he stayed up at nights to work in the basement at home. The door opens and sure enough, it is Kenneth. The telephone rings and he answers. We hear him say, "Yes, dear, Yes, I'll be right home. Yes, Yes, Yes dear, Yes, I am coming right now, Jackie".

Next we see the name of Ivan Jayne appear on the screen. Ivan is head of the airplane plant we see located in Hawaii. It seems as though Ivan is just running the plant for a hobby and his real business is that of deep sea diving. We see him now in his suit ready to go down for some more specimens which he will send back to the United States to Mr. Greenawalds' Biology class.

Next we see the name of Evelyn Findley. We see her now in a, believe it or not, little village in Africa. She and her husband are there on a mission to direct the building of Churches and schools in localities where there are none. They have traveled throughout the world on such welfare missions.

Next the name of Rosemary Shumaker flashes across the screen. We see her, believe it or not, driving a car up the drive to a college that she is attending. I guess that her dad must have finally succeeded in teaching Rosemary to drive. I can remember though that Rosemary insisted that she could drive. I guess she just used a different method that her father didn't understand. In fact nobody understood it except Rosemary. All of a sudden the little girl turns the dial on the machine again and the panel covering covers the screen. We start to tell her to leave it on but she says, "You know the rest of Rosemary's life, anyway. Yes, I guess we do. Rosemary finished college to become PROFESSOR Shumaker.

I remember when we were going to High School at Morley, every morning Rosemary would walk so straight and tall into the assembly and past my desk. I would always say to her as she came by "Hi, Professor Shumaker.

I suppose you are wondering just who "We" are, and who the little girl is. Well, the little girl is Rosemary's daughter. The people watching are her husband. Yes, this is the mansion in which Rosemary and her husband live. It seems that Morley has grown to quite a sizeable city. Rosemary has invited each of her classmates, Laurene, Wayne, Harlene, Kenneth, Ivan, Evelyn and their families for a Sunday dinner. When we came upstairs we were going to tell Rosemary's little daughter that it was time for dinner but I guess that we got so absorbed in the Time machine and the program it was showing that we forgot. I remember our class motto "Our Aim is High, Our Goal Success". I guess maybe in real life we may not reach the SOCIAL success mentioned here but if we keep in mind our goal and keep our trust in God, we will reach that goal of success. Well, I hear classmates calling now. We had better hurry because after dinner we are going up to the schoolhouse and see if it has changed since we were Seniors in the year 1953.

Memory Days

Remember the night Kenny B. wanted to know where Margo's big dog was?
What's wrong Red, does he bite?

Remember the surprise Harlene and Evelyn received after locking themselves in the closet and discovered Mr. Greenawald in the office.

Remember the drippy things Laurene did in her dizzy days.

Remember the day a dog chased the Morley boys basketball squad at Iowa City.
"He almost got you, didn't he Louie" .

Remember the day when Ivan said he was all ears and Laurene replied, "I always thought that until I saw your feet."

Remember the night we found Kenny and Jackie parked on that lonely curve.

Remember the day Jim stayed home, because he had a sore neck. Watch it, Jim, girls are dangerous.

Remember the night Lonnie and Janet went over to see Allen Eden. It was kind of late wasn't it Allen.

Continued:

Remember the day Rosemary went swimming in the girls locker the day after a hard rain "Oh, now Rosemary, we know you tripped on the threshold."

Remember the day when Doc. Tallman treated Sharon Sivers injured knee with rubbing linament instead of Nitrotan. Well, the bottles looked the same didn't they, Harlene?

Remember the day that Evelyn, after ringing central and hearing a strange voice, told the Morley telephone operator to "get off the telephone downstairs". Well, how should Evelyn know that the operator had a cold and didn't talk natural.

Remember the day Lowell tipped his chair back and fell over. Mrs. Russell always said that would happen. "Tain't funny, McGee."

Remember the day that the Morley boys got the idea that architecture and interior decorating would be fun. Why didn't someone tell them they weren't to draw pictures on the locker wall.

Remember the day Evelyn thought all mammals had fur and Mr. Greenawald was ready to sell his "pelt"?

Remember the day when the seats were changed. Gee, that's too bad, Kathy and Lowell.

Remember the day Margo left her State Tournament Ticket at home. We sure were glad to see her dad with the tickets in Springville, "Weren't we, Margo."

Remember the day when "barber" Marvin Marsh gave a fellow Junior, Red Brokaw, a "butch". Now boys you were supposed to be working on the Banquet.

Remember the "night" when Pricilla, Gene, Margo and Kenny B. watched the police radio tower lights while waiting for the folks to bring some gas for the car. "Let's keep it filled" the next time Red."

Remember the night Sandra thought she had a "rocking horse" instead of a "charlie horse".

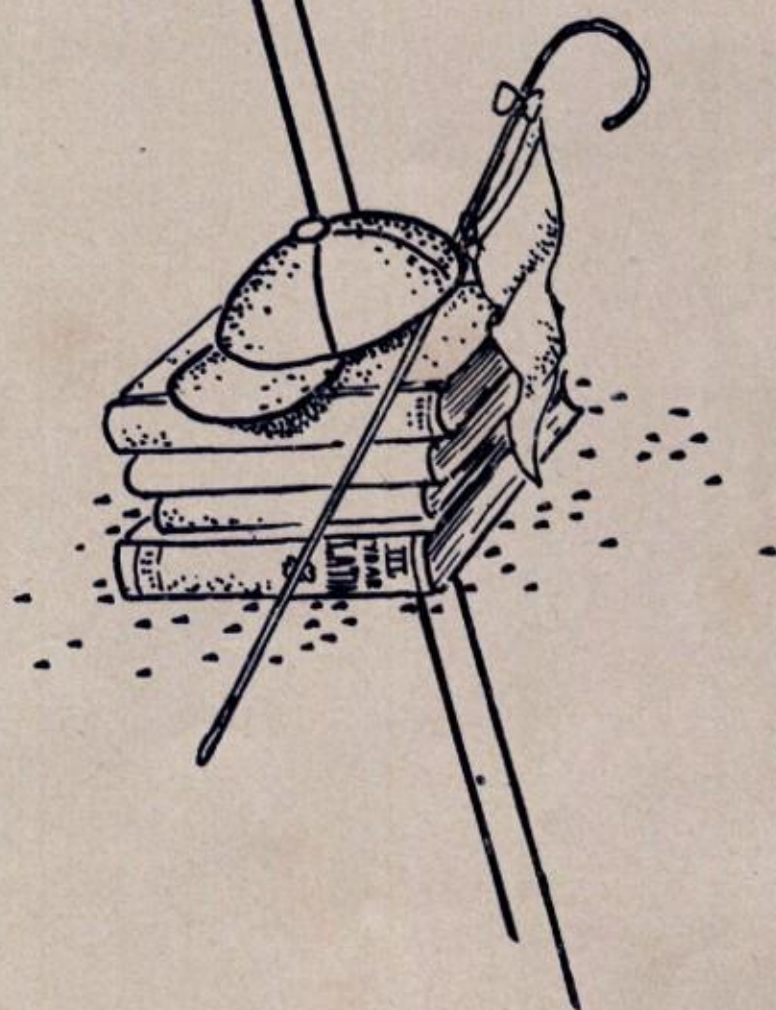

Remember the day Evelyn was flustered when we mentioned attending Ames Veishea Day.

Remember the day Harlene and Nancy J. thought they were getting chicken when they ordered "Chicken fried Steak"? My, we were surprised when we were served steak instead of chicken, weren't we girls?

Remember the day Ivan sold all of our schedule pencils at three for a nickle? Oh, well thats alright, Ivan. We only bought them at four cents a pencil.

Remember the day Wayne told Mrs. Russell, after she had asked if anyone had been in a very severe snow storm when the snow came up to the eaves, that he was in the hog house once when that happened.
